The following article was olipped from editorial of the Southern Cultivator: There is no need to be frightened because of the effects of the government's estimates upon the price of cotton. In 1903 Mr. Wilson's report cost the south about seventy-five million dollars and now he comes with another report which will cost the south many million more if we sell our cotton at the low ebb. The salvation of the south is for the Farmers to hold their cotton and refuse absolutely to sell except at a fair price. Just quietly go along, quit selling, and you will see prices advance~ If all the farmers would heed this advice we can get a splendid price for the balance of the unmarketed crop.

The world needs all the cotton we have made this year, and the manufacturers should be made to pay a good price for it. They can make fine dividends at ten cents cotton. Farmers had just as well get advantage of the profits as the speculators. If the farmers get frightened into selling by the sudden depression they will loose and the middle man gets the profits

The First National Bank of Batesburg will lend money on cotton stored in the warehouses of the Batesburg Warehouse Co, and thus enable you to make the profits. W. H. TIM. ERMAN, President.
